

NRA EXPERT - Selena Salo

We proudly announce the accomplishment of Selena Salo earning the NRA Expert classification for small-bore rifle shooting. Selena has been part of our Jr. Rifle organization since April of 2006. She has progressed through the required 250 targets, in four positions, with accuracy and perseverance and has exemplified her self-motivational skills allowing her to reach this level of shooting competency.

Selena resides with her parents in Shelby Township and she is a product of home schooling at the 9th grade level. This active 14 year old loves to read and play RPG and FPS games. At home, you might find her behind the ivory keys of her piano which is another talent she has mastered as well. Selena mixes her outdoor activities with a desire to shoot archery in addition to her small-bore practice time. As with the majority of our Jr. Rifle success stories, Selena has her goals in place for the future which center on acquiring a shooting scholarship to attend college and major in the field of Forensic Science. This past season has allowed her to participate in competitive shooting events both indoors and out. She has earned some very promising scores which will enforce our team's progress in the competitive world. Besides her accomplishments in small-bore rifle, this young teenager has developed a desire to participate in the sport of pistol shooting and has taken the appropriate course work. When asked why she likes to shoot small-bore rifle? Selena replied, " I didn't at first but my dad made me go and I eventually fell in love with it." Her dad, Corey, is one of our Jr. Rifle instructors and coaches. This young lady also participates in the Sea Cadet program which has taken her to many locations and has given her the experience of being on the high seas.

Congratulations on your success from all your coaches and instructors here at the DSC. We are proud to be part of your very busy lifestyle.
